

Wandering Pet Is Home Again

Toby's come home. The wandering black and white tomcat owned by Mrs. Kathleen Bergeron finally put in an appearance after straying from home for over a week. Toby came home New Year's day.

The Bergerons were worried for fear Toby had met with foul play since he had just recently returned from the hospital where he was confined after an automobile accident Thanksgiving Day. He suffered a broken leg and internal injuries and two weeks ago the pin was removed from the leg that had to be set.

Then Toby got wanderlust. Mrs. Bergeron looked everywhere and just when she had given up hope for the pet she had as a kitten since July, in strutting Toby after a seven-day absence, in perfect health.

Where had he been? Toby's not talking.

Group Praises Mrs. L. Hill For Xmas Seal Sale

Mrs. Laurance Hill, head of the Campbell Christmas Seal sale for 1948, was lauded by the Santa Clara County Tuberculosis Association for her work in the recent campaign here.

The great interest of Santa Clara County residents in the work of the Santa Clara County Tuberculosis Association was proved by the strong local support given to the 1948 Christmas Seal drive, according to association president Dr. C. Gerald Scarborough. Return in to date show $43,981, with almost 50 per cent of the mailing list heard from. With late returns from persons who may have overlooked their seals during the Christmas rush, it is expected that the goal of $50,000 may be reached within the next month.

"We wish to remind those who have still to answer their Seal Sale letter that it is not too late to do so. The tuberculosis association conducts a year-round service of tuberculosis prevention and control in this community. This work depends on a successful 1948 Seal Sale," said Scarborough.

Nat'l Perlite Co. Operates Two Shifts Daily As Firm Reaches Peak Production

One of Campbell's newest industries, the National Perlite Company, is now on steady production, working two shifts per day, and producing expanded Perlite Aggregate for the building trade. The second shift is necessary because of the increased demand for the product. Shipments are going forward to various dealers in Northern California in lots of five to eight hundred bags.

Chester R. Smith, newly-elected President of the National Perlite Company, has been a contractor and builder in Santa Clara Valley for the past twenty years, and is well-known in this vicinity. Joseph D. Canoles, Sales Manager, has been in the building industry trade for many years.

The product known as Perlite is a light weight aggregate, used in plastering and stucco work. It has the advantage of being exceedingly light in weight, high in insulating value, and is being accepted with enthusiasm by the plastering trade. It produces a plaster which does not crack or check when properly applied, and which insulates of itself without the necessity of added insulation for dwellings or commercial buildings. Being light in weight, it appeals to many plasterers who are now using it. It is fireproof and vermin proof. Nails can be driven into Perlite plaster without cracking it.

FROM VOLCANIC ROCK

The material is produced from a volcanic rock which is processed by heat under carefully controlled conditions which cause the rock particles to explode into glass globules. With proper binder, Perlite aggregate can be used also for acoustical tile, for lightweight building blocks and bricks, for insulating slabs in various shapes and uses, for base under radiant heating pipes to prevent loss of heat, and in many other ways.

National Perlite Company in Campbell has been an experimental plant for the past two years, and is now on two-shift production for the first time. Nelson Bros. Trucking Company is engaged to truck such loads as the one pictured, and due to the light weight of the material such large loads as this can be carried without difficulty. The material is packed in burlap bags containing approximately three cubic feet each, each bag weighing approximately thirty pounds. A crew of five men on the day shift and two men on the night shift are adequate for producing and sacking the product.

ALMADEN VOTES 'NO' AGAINST ENTERING SCHOOL DISTRICT

"The Almaden pupils will remain in the Campbell high school district at least until June," said Principal Laurance Hill yesterday. Almaden voted in their January 4 election not to join the high school district here.

"WE WANT THEM, BUT—" "We want to keep the Almaden children in our schools but since the voters in that district voted against joining us so overwhelmingly then some other arrangement will probably have to be made for the school year 1949-1950 and thereafter," said Hill.

At present Almaden pupils attend the Campbell schools on a tuition basis. As a result of the election, Almaden might decide to form its own high school district, possibly in conjunction with the adjoining Oak Grove Elementary school district. Meanwhile negotiations are being made with Los Gatos High school to accept the

SIMPLE MAJORITY

In order to grant a district here, a simple majority of voters is all that is needed to swing the election. If the voters kill the district then all action on the year-old plan is stopped. If, however, the election is carried, then the County Board of Supervisors would appoint a five-man committee from the district to investigate the needs, equipment and personnel necessary for the district. The plans would then be submitted to the people in the form of a bond election.

If such a district is formed and if the building is proposed and approved by the voters, the committee would apply for public funds from the Federal and State governments. These funds would cover two-thirds of the costs, or one-third from the State and one-third from the Federal government.

The familiar silver and blue Army Air Force recruiting bus is back in Campbell on its regular Thursday visits, parked across from the Post Office. Visitors and applicants will be welcomed by a new and genial personality, Master Sergeant Gary Hyde, veteran of a long and colorful military career.

NEED FINANCIAL SUPPORT

"It isn't that we don't want the Almaden pupils to come into this district," said the Campbell high principal, "as of course we do. The question was raised this year as to how we can afford to allow the 91 Almaden students to attend our schools if we don't get any financial support from that district. And if more pupils come from that area next year we would probably have to build to accommodate them. For that reason we asked the Almaden district to come into our high school district and help share in the support of the schools."

On Monday night the Board of Directors will meet with Hill to discuss what is to be done with the Almaden children in the years to come. If they wish to remain in the Campbell schools then some other arrangements must be made.

Maxon Tells Campbell PTA Of Past, Present Methods Used In Japanese School System

Occupation forces in Japan today are trying to discourage the pre-war idea in the Japanese schools of wanting to make war on other nations, said Yale Maxon, interpreter, in a talk before PTA members at the Campbell Grammar school Tuesday.

Maxon served as interpreter with the United States armed forces during the war and aided in the war trials in Japan from October 1945 to June 1948. He was a school teacher in the Japanese schools prior to the war.

"Today the occupation forces are stressing in the Japanese schools to think, imagine and inquire," Maxon told the PTA. "This is a far cry from the lesson plan taught before the war in which discipline and patriotism were the main theme."

15 YEARS OF SCHOOL

Before the war the school system in Japan was divided into three classifications, Maxon explained. The elementary level lasted for six years, then came the middle school for five years and finally the higher school or university training was the finishing point. Entrance exams were required for all levels above the elementary stage.

Today the occupation forces have established co-education in the Japanese schools. They are attempting to change many of the ideas the school system had before the war. The results of their work in this country won't be known for a long time to come.

READING 'N WRITING

Reading and writing take up a large part of the lesson time in the elementary school, Maxon explained. This is due to the fact that the children write in Chinese and read in Japanese.

Maxon concluded his talk on a hopeful note as to the outcome of the various educational plans of the occupational forces in Japan.

Also on the program for the afternoon was a group of folk dances presented by the seventh grade pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Wilkinson.

In the business meeting Mrs. J. R. Longfellow, PTA president, was elected to the nominating committee for the El Paradiso council.

Moorpark Honors Fathers on Wed.

Moorpark PTA will hold Father's Night January 12 at 7:30 p.m. in room 9 at the school. Ben Ziegler, woodshop teacher of the Campbell elementary school, will speak on "Industrial Arts." Dessert and coffee will be served by the fourth grade mothers.

Shambrook Talks To 4-H Club Boys On Year Activities

Members of the County Club Council will enjoy their annual pot-luck supper at the January meeting of the leaders this Tuesday, January 11, at the Evergreen School, Mrs. William Britton, Assistant Leader of the Paradise Valley Club, is chairman of the committee in charge of making the arrangements. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Bernard Greiff, Assistant Leader of the Morgan Hill Club; Mrs. Al Althenour, Home Furnishings Leader of the Almaden Club; and Mrs. William Jurian, Assistant Leader of the Los Altos Club.

Mrs. Britton stated the event will start at 6:45 p.m. She urges all of the Council members to be on time so the supper will not interfere with the regular Council meeting. During this part of the evening, Mrs. June MacLure, and Miss Patricia Larson, Assistant Home Demonstration Agents, will conduct an individual improvement demonstration.

The business part of the Council meeting will be conducted by C. E. Scott, San Martin club leader. The leaders at the business meeting will discuss plans for the annual Council dance, which will be held at the San Jose Elks Club on February 12; and features of the 4-H Club part of the 1949 County Fair Premium List.

LOS ALTOS CLUB

The importance of outlining the year's activities was discussed at the December meeting of the Los Altos 4-H Club by George Shambrook, Assistant Farm Advisor. The meeting held at the Los Altos American Legion Hall, was under the direction of the club leader, William Jurian. Don Zangrando, club president, conducted the club meeting.

Shambrook outlined the steps to be taken in planning the year's work, and discussed how the club could qualify for a 4-H Club Charter this fall. He told the club members that any organization without a definite program did not get very far toward any goal. The year's plan of work is a requirement for a club to obtain a Charter.

The members of the club voted to try to qualify the club for a Charter. As a result of this vote the president was authorized to appoint a committee to outline the club's program of work. Those members of the committee are Coraleen and Jackie Jurian, and Roger and Molly Carr.

After the club meeting refreshments were served to the members and their parents by Mrs. Carr, Mrs. Zangrando, and Mrs. Jurian.

State Board Needs Real Estate Men As Commissioners

California real estate men were today advised of current employment opportunities as Deputy Real Estate Commissioners, according to State Personnel Board officials here.

Successful applicants will be selected through a State civil service examination to be held January 29, 1949. Applications will be accepted through Jan. 8, 1949, for this examination.

In addition to California residence, candidates for the $325 monthly position must present a background of experience in the field, such as sales, property management, loans or escrows. A minimum of two years experience of this type must be shown, or three years of full-time experience in law enforcement investigation work. Graduation from college is also called for, although additional qualifying experience may be substituted on a year-for-year basis.

Employment in these positions is located primarily in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Waterfowl Season Closes Saturday

One of California's best waterfowl hunting seasons of recent years comes to an end one hour before sunset, Saturday, Jan. 8, reports the Division of Fish and Game.

An all-time high number of California scattergunners, estimated at more than 175,000, have found their chances of bagging daily limits of five ducks, five geese, 15 coots and 25 mergansers enhanced by generally heavy rain throughout the State.

Wardens of the Division of Fish and Game, lending a hand to U.S. Fish and Wildlife agents, are expected to chalk up a record total of arrests for violation of the Federal law requiring plugged guns. No more than three shells may be contained in shotguns used for waterfowl hunting.

(M.C. from San Diego County)

Do people still make New Year resolutions? Each year I seem to hear less about them and I wonder if the custom is passing. If it is, it's too bad, because it was a good thing for each of us to take inventory and resolve either to eliminate those habits which may have been bad for us, or to cultivate qualities that would help make us better guys, if not actually "good Joes."

I isn't too late in 1949 to make resolutions, if you haven't already done it, and I should like to suggest some that we all might make. They are based on the theme of the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D.D., Litt. D., in his Thanksgiving Day proclamation, which loses nothing in its application to the New Year.

Doctor Harris seems to have diagnosed our individual disease as well as our national ailment. He says in part, "America's plight today is directly attributable to too much 'give me.' What a chorus is heard from ocean to ocean: Give me my rights, give me more money, more leisure, more pleasure! He goes on to say, that 'The Dead Sea is dead because it has no outlet; it takes in everything and gives out nothing. That policy is guaranteed to kill a sea, a nation or an individual life. To give is to live. To make one's chief business squeezing the orange of life, just to see what one can get out of it . . . is but to find at the last only an empty rind in grasping hands.'"

A New Year resolution based on Doctor Harris' diagnosis could take various forms. It might be "I resolve not to expect anything to which I am not genuinely entitled or do not deserve"—or it might be "I resolve not to demand a day's pay unless I have given an honest day's work"—or it could be a resolution to be a little less selfish, to observe the rights of others (even in minor ways, such as in driving in traffic, or in the shops by not demanding service out of turn). It might even take the form of reviving our Boy Scout training to the extent of doing a good deed daily, though that seems to have fallen into disrepute and evokes laughter whenever the phrase is uttered in public.

The truth is that we all expect too much of what we have not earned. Too many of us seem to have exchanged the wisdom of Benjamin Franklin (despite the examples all around us of the rewards for initiative and application) for the philosophy that the world owes us a living; that the provident have an obligation to support the improvident; that the Government is running a giant jackpot giveaway show.

Not only must we change that philosophy within ourselves. We must also resolve to teach our younger generation self-reliance and the unparalleled satisfaction of a job well done. Do you realize that our teen-agers have learned little of the dignity of personal achievement, surrounded as they have been, from birth by the clamor of so many of us to a paternalistic Government to take over our responsibilities?

Those of us who are fortunate enough to be sound of mind and impoverished of spirit as our national trend would indicate, and the beginning of a New Year is a perfect time to pledge ourselves to the development of a new philosophy—one that will not only bring greater fulfillment to our individual lives, but will also turn the tide against bigger Government, and make it possible for each of us to lend assistance to those who have less, either physically or spiritually.

Some of the greatest achievements known have been accomplished by those who are physically handicapped and if they can do so much, certainly we who are whole can meet the challenge.

We can each resolve to stand on our own two feet, to meet each day as a new challenge to our ability to cope with our problems, to develop a sense of responsibility, to stop thinking of what the world owes us and concentrate on what we owe ourselves.

If we do not successfully combat our individual passing of the buck and our "gimme-ness" we are going to find ourselves completely submerged by a bureaucratic Government all too willing to take over where we, as individuals, leave off. And no matter how Utopian it may appear on the surface, in actual practice we will find that every time we get something from the Government, be it house or handout, we lose some of our privacy and our freedom.

To put it bluntly, are we going to lose character and permit our moral fibre to disintegrate, or are we going to put up a stiff battle to retain our personal liberty?

Successful Parenthood

Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

WITH all our amateur delving into psychiatric lore we seem to be losing sight of the role a good, old-fashioned conscience plays in our adjustments to life. Psychologists, of course, merely have other names for this inner mentor—they don't really disregard conscience. But it seems to me that we as individuals would be less confused if we would get back into the chummy relationship our grandparents had with that "still, small voice" which seeks to guide our conduct.

One reason conscience has lost some of its meaning is that too many of us juggle with it. It would be better to pay no attention to its promptings than to do as you please and then look for justifications for having gone against conscience. Psychologists call this rationalizing. And it is something to look out for in children, for the habit grows early. Johnny keeps the biggest apple for himself and then says, "I gave you the little one because it is red" or shiny, or whatever he can think up to justify his selfishness.

If this sort of excuse, offered as a virtue, comes often to your child's lips, have some little talks with him about it. Children want so terribly to be liked and approved of that they are easily led to painting a pretty picture to cover their less desirable traits. Say something like this to Johnny, "Taking the biggest apple for yourself isn't necessarily wrong, if you're especially hungry, just say 'I'm going to have the biggest this time' and no one will mind. But pretending that you are giving the other person the best of things when you really aren't doesn't fool anybody but yourself."

Another reason why conscience has fallen into disrepute is that it often grows to frightening proportions. Feelings of guilt are the basis for so many mental ills that the sense of right and wrong, which all children have, should be watched and tested by understanding parents and teachers to make sure a child isn't suffering from too heavy a load of responsibility. To use an extreme example, but a not uncommon one, children often blame themselves for the death of a parent, relative or friend because at times they have fiercely wanted that person out of their way. Guilt of this sort is so painful that the mind often buries it. Then out of this turning against oneself, the reason for the self-loathing no longer remembered, grow dissatisfactions and maladjustments which, if not relieved, sometimes cause mental breakdown. The film "The Snake Pit," which every parent should see, illustrates this—and also holds out the hope for cure. More important still, it suggests preventive measures parents can take to relieve a child's mistaken sense of having committed unpardonable sin.

If, then, conscience provides temptation for trickery on the one hand, and is a pitfall for the sensitive on the other, why do we uphold it at all? Because a clear sense of right and wrong is the most comforting mental attribute one can own in maturity. But you don't gain it just by growing older. It comes through listening to conscience all one's life but learning to interpret what it says honestly, neither too much in one's own favor nor too much against oneself. To achieve this balance children need help in getting started on the right track in understanding the promptings of conscience.

THEATER PATRONS GREET NEW YEAR IN GAY PARTY

Gags, fun, and lots of laughs were the order of the evening at the Campbell Theater's stage show New Year's eve. The largest crowd in the history of the theater packed the show house to see a big double feature, a 30 minute stage show, and receive over $100 in give-away merchandise.

Master of Ceremonies and dressed as old man 1948 was theater clowning for the stage show are infant '49 (Joe Kirk) and Old Timer 1948 (Manager Steve Butler).

manager Steve Butler. He wore a white sheet draped around him and a long white beard and wig. He carried in his hand the scythe of the old year.

At 11:57 p.m., Butler appeared and greeted the theater patrons. Then he called for the New Year as the hour approached midnight. Down the aisle came baby 1949 dressed in the traditional diaper. It was assistant manager Joe Kirk and he lived up the show with capers and jokes as he approached and took away the spotlight from old 1948.

Then it was midnight. Everybody laughed, shouted, greeted one another. Mr. 1948 and 1949 soloed on the song "Happy New Year to You," to the tune of the birthday song.

The drawing of the merchandise was next. Six lucky Campbell residents received prizes donated by Campbell merchants. "All in all," said Butler, "it was a gay evening and everybody had a good time."

Larrod feeders are getting big results—by feeding Larro Broiler Feed in both mash and pelleted form.

Here's how: Start with the mash. Then at the end of the fourth week, begin scattering Larro Broiler Pellets (chick-size) on top of the mash each forenoon and afternoon. Use quantities the birds will clean up in about 30 minutes.

Larro Broiler Pellets sharpen the birds' appetites—put on 4 to 8 extra ounces per bird—more than pay for your extra feeding time. Get the facts and you'll get Larro. See us today.
